No more waiting for someone in the office to search through drawers and fax the information. No more waiting for someone to type email. No more leaving the job before the job is done.

What Do I Need to Use FingerDoc?

Just a cell phone.

FingerDoc is a program that runs on your cell phone. If you do not have a Java-based cell phone, it is no more expensive than a standard cellular phone. With a Java-based cell phone, you can benefit from FingerDoc and other productivity-increasing applications.

How Does it Work?

Your cell phone runs the small FingerDoc application that does two important things:

1. Gives you the ability to seek out needed documents. You use the cell phone buttons and the information on the phone screen to search for your documents.
2. Automatically communicates with the FingerDoc control center. The control center finds your documents and sends them to you via fax, email.

It's as easy to do as making a phone call.

Just What Are These Documents?

The standard documents you already use, such as Microsoft Word, Adobe PDF, scanned-in paper, or just about anything you have stored on the computer.

Who Benefits Most From FingerDoc?

Professionals who work in the field or on-the-road will benefit greatly from FingerDoc. If your clients can access email or receive a fax, you can supply them with needed information. If you are out of the office, you can easily retrieve the information you need.

Some specific professions and applications for FingerDoc are:

- Sales reps
- Field engineers
- Sales support
- Building trades
- Medical professionals
